

Kevin's Puzzle of the Week

March 22, 2021

I was trying to listen to some wrestling on the radio, but I just couldn't seem to keep track of the scores.

Armstrong starts the frame with a gutter ball, and follows up by just clipping the ten-pin, sending it clattering. Now it's Baker, who knocks down seven pins on his first ball, and with his second he picks up the spare! Armstrong again - this time he leaves himself a 7-10 split, and manages to hit nothing on the second ball. Baker fares even worse, only managing to topple three pins with the first ball, though he gets four more on the second.

It's been a back-and-forth first quarter here at the arena. The Dodgers are six-for-fourteen from the floor, including a terrible one-for-six from behind the arc. They have made three of four free throws, however. The Cougars are only two-of-four on free throws, but they have made seven of their ten field goal attempts, including three of five from downtown.

On the par-five first hole, Edwards managed an eagle, before scoring a hole in one on the par-three second. He followed this up with birdies on the next two holes, a par-three and a par-four. Fallon had a much rougher start, bogeying the first hole, before fighting back with pars on the next two holes and an eagle on hole four.

The Gators opened the scoring with a touchdown and PAT, but the Hawks came roaring back in the second quarter with a touchdown of their own, despite missing the extra point. They took the lead with a field goal in the third quarter. In the fourth quarter, the Gators added another touchdown and PAT, sealing the victory for good.

Each team had scored exactly once in each of the first five innings, before the Inferno turned up the offense, scoring four more runs in the top of the sixth. The Jets answered with a two-RBI homer in the bottom of the inning, but the Inferno put the game away with a grand slam in the seventh, and a solo home run in the top of the ninth.
