What's Wrong?

There are those who say that questions are annoying and a waste of time. However, I believe that a person never really lives if they don't ask questions. Asking questions is the way we learn new things in life. If you have a question, just ask. Do you know if pineapple is one word or two? What do people mean when they say "Down Under"? I always make it a point to try to answer the questions of other people, since the more they learn, the better off they will be. There are so many things that we as humanity don't know much about, such as the bottom of the sea or the surface of Venus, that it seems a shame not to promote learning. That's why I always try to answer any questions I get.
